Jack Johnson Going to Russia to Fill a Few Theatrical Dates.

JACK JOHNSON isn't a Frenchman after all. France has missed one misfortune. Johnson, in London, has just been at the American Embassy to get passports for a trip to Russia. When he was closely questioned, because of the general belief that he had taken out his first papers in France, he denied that he had ever "even thought of changing into a Frenchman." He produced an American passport six months old which had run out, but which named Johnson as an American. After answering questions Jack received his new papers. He is going to Russia to fill a few theatrical dates for which he signed up before the beginning of the war.

Johnson drove to the embassy in a big limousine, accompanied by his wife, who wore two or three carats of diamonds and several other sparkles of ten value. When the clerk saw the "jewels" he hastily decided that Johnson must be still a citizen of the United States.

At the time Johnson was supposed to have taken out French citizenship papers—or at least to have signed the preliminary forms—he was quoted to the effect that he wished France would have a war with America, so that he could enlist in the French army. If Jack ever said that he's eliminated a chance to make good on the enlistment end, sayaway.

"UNBOAT SMITH'S record is quite remarkable in its way," says the London sportsman, "and, considering that he pretends to have no pretensions to courage or skill, Gunboat must be credited with a great foot in wading through a host of big men so successfully. I don't know how he got his six wins. His record shows that not only has he never been knocked out, but that the only decision given against him since he began boxing in 1908, six years ago, is to a foul that overtook him in his match with Carpenter."

"Really, remarkable is the way," says the Guardsman's "second," as he sits in a London music box printed partly in invisible ink. The knockouts scored against him didn't show. It's a matter of record that Gunboat Smith has been knocked out twice—by Jim Barnes and once by Danier Jack Geyer. Of course these knockouts were early in Geyer's career and his record since that time has been remarkable. Still I wonder why it is that boxes of any nationality visiting strange countries always present these apolice, immaculate "seconds." They all do it and they all sit away with it for a while.

"SAVAGE'S manager is worried because Savage can't induce other heavyweights to go with him. He writes:

"Savage has won his last sixteen fights in a row. In fact, since losing to Smith he has met and defeated some of the best men we have. He's remained unbeaten since that day, but the public won't even stop to listen to his challenges. Why we challenge any heavyweight and the answer we get is: 'Savage is only a bum; he can't fight.' The trouble is they know differently, and they won't take a chance with him after the way he whipped and knocked out Frank and Tom Kennedy. He has lost only five fights in thirteen years. Since losing to Smith he has beaten Tom McNamee, Tim Logue, Al Kukl, Porky Flynn, Dan Daly, Al McCloskey, Tony Ross and many more lights."

"We don't want any easy marks. Savage wants another crack at Gunboat Smith, but the man we want to show us our man business is Sam Langford. Sincerely,

PERCY WOODRUFF, Manager.

"SAVAGE started like a 'coming champion,' but let down in his work when it was most promising. He neglected training and lost popularity by entering the ring fat and in poor condition. When he's fit he can fight, and when he's confident as well as fit he can fight anybody. When he isn't confident he makes a poor fight. The trouble about making matches with Savage is that he's likely to have a championship night, and then clean up anybody and put blot on any one's pugilistic reputation. Nowadays fighters like to be sure before they enter the ring."

"SEE that Freddy Welsh may fight Jack Britton. Don't know how Britton is this year, but a year ago he could have cleaned up half a dozen Freddie's in half a dozen successive nights. As Freddy ignored his challenges entirely, I imagine Welsh's statement that he'll fight Britton at last is such a surprise that he'll have to look Jack up and see what's the matter with him. Perhaps he has a bit on leg."

"CLIVE Knocks Out Lewis. Clive Cline, the sensational featherweight, has knocked out Lewis of Jack Lewis at the New Pote A. & B. Knocking him out in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout. The crowd was so great that the Fire Department had to close off the street and closed the doors."

"HOGES Wins at Billiards. The first rapid fire three-ball tourney was won by Alex Moore, who defeated Eddie Moore, 20 to 14. Fred Hedges, 18 to 14, and Eddie Hedges, 18 to 14.
